

The committee is also considering a feasibility study as to our possible involvement in any future archaeological investigations in our area. Members ideas on this subject will be welcomed.

So despite the unprecedented national situation, you can see the Society has not been dormant and I would like to thank Terry Coles, John Grubb, Robert Vaughan, Jon Bailey and my wife Ann for their support, dedication and innovation during this difficult period. They have all been crucial in keeping " the show on the road".

Finally I thank you, all our members for your continued support and I also welcome all new members who have joined us during the year. We all look forward to more normal times soon.

Peter Alexander.
